Slug and snail control throughout the season

Let's face it, slugs and snails are here to stay, every year they reappear like clockwork, large, small and billions of newly hatched juveniles heading straight for your prized plants and vegetables.

For gardeners keen to protect beneficial wildlife in the garden and tackle slugs, Neudorff's Sluggo® Slug & Snail Killer can be used in exactly the same way as other slug pellets, but also protects animals that eat large amounts of the pests such as hedgehogs and birds. The pellets contain iron-III-phosphate, which also occurs in nature. All Sluggo® products are certified by the Organic Farmers & Growers Association.

The effective pellets stop slugs eating very quickly, once consumed they die in their burrows hidden from view, leaving no slime trails or visible dead slugs, unlike metaldehyde-based formulas, which kill the pests through dehydration.

The pellets are extremely rain resistant and any uneaten pellets will convert into the plant nutrients iron and phosphate. The composition of the formula means no harmful substances will remain in the soil. Two varieties of Sluggo® Slug & Snail Killer are now available, the bestselling Sluggo® Slug & Snail

Killer and Sluggo® Slug & Snail Killer Ultra, which contains double the amount of iron-III-phosphate. Its powerful micro pellets are half the size of conventional treatments, making them much easier for the juvenile pests to eat. They offer double concentration and double the coverage of Sluggo® Slug & Snail Killer.

Neudorff's top tips for natural slug and snail control

- Water only in the morning, not at night
- Encourage natural enemies to the garden such as birds, hedgehogs, shrews and toads
- Mulch beds with dry materials as thinly as possible so that the top layer is covered
- Loosen soil repeatedly to destroy underground hiding places
- Do not over dig soil in autumn, slugs and snails will lay their eggs under freshly dug clods of soil
